L1 S1 FC G. R. H FINAL EXAM

Text

Charles did not care to smile, but he did like to complain. When the day was sunny, Charles said it was too hot. When the birds sang, he said they were too loud. Charles said parties were too crowded and rainbows were too colorful. One day, Charles was in his garden grumbling that the carrots were too orange. And he thought the trees were too tall. Suddenly, an elf appeared. The elf spoke slowly, as he tried to control his anger. The elf said, "I have heard enough of your complaining. You grumble all day. You fuss all night. I am going to grant you three wishes. Then perhaps you will stop being such a grouch!" "Only three wishes? Why can't I have more than three?" whined Charles. "Forget it! No wishes for you!" yelled the elf. The elf disappeared. "They were probably crummy wishes anyway," Charles complained.
